TODAY Is The REGISTER'S 52nd BIRTHDAY

GREETINGS TO EVERYONE. MAY THE CHOICEST BLESSINGS BE YOUR LOT

FIFTY YEARS AND TWO

Friends with me you've idly wandered, down the years now fifty-two-

Thro' the sunshine and the shadow, still together, I and you.

Dost remember on the morning when to you my message came, Up and down each printed column there was mention of some name, Of some name to you so cherished, but today, where are they all? Like the leaves and flowers that perish; they have gone beyond recall; Still the memory of their lives has been mellowed by the years, And the record of my pages, brings alike the smiles and tears. Here, a liny habe was born-and the hearts and hopes heat high: Just beneath a requien; sad, and we ponder with a sigh-Then we turn the yellowed page and a bride is passing near, A slight and girlish form, to many hearts held dear ... A vision rare of beauty scent of orange blossoms sweet-The groom, tall, dark and handsome, and the picture is complete. Then again my columns tell you, while mem'ry reaches far-Of a meeting in the Court Room -and the old distinguished bar. And in tancy we now hear them, as of old their voices rung In the eloquence of pleading when you and I were young. On, 'tis sad'ning looking backward thro' the violet haze of tears-So together let us turn to the pages of the years-Let us "dip into the future," where the pages all are white-Lift our eyes above the mountains, and behold the dawn of light; Let us sing the song of friumph -- all undaunted, you and I: Reach the hand of help and courage, to some weary passer-by; And beyond the clouds that lower, there will burn a brighter light-To guide, when earth has vanished, the tired spirits of the night.

FROM A CHILD'S GARDEN OF VERSE.

Many a bird is in the tree Singing marry songs to me But none are half so sweet as yours, Robin Red. February 7, 1914

Little Dorcas Club Recital.

The Little Dorcas Club will give Concert at the Normal Chapel Monday Evening at 7.30. This musical will be of exceptional interest on account of the juvenile performers who range in age from nine to twelve. There will be several piano selections ocal soles and some recitations. The entire entertainment wa planned and perfected by the children without help from any grown up. This enterprising little band, which Written by Grant E. The Moonlight Schools of Kentucky

At Manchester, up in Clay county of long ago, there was a celebration which probably stands without a par allel in history. The ranking feature was a parade. At the head of the column "Uncle" Ed Stivers, 69 years of age, carried an American flag. In the imposing line, he was next to the oldest scholar-for every one of the 667 men and women were beginners in school

They were celebrating their eman cipation. They had learned to read and write. They were a battallion of the army which the Kentucky Illiteracy Commission is delivering out of bondage. "No Illiteracy In Kentucky In 1920" is the slogan of the movent. The aim for 1916 was to teach 2.500 persons to read and write.

Mrs. Stewart is known nationally s "Mother of the Moonlight School Up among the Highlands in the first night school for adults, she conceived the idea which is fast bringing to the State the emancipation which citizen of Clay county celebrated. More than that, the crusade has extended to other States, and the author's pattern as found adoption.-Barbourville Advocate

"Ever since the closing of the re-stricted district," said Mrs. Eghert, there has been criticism that immoral woman are walking the streets at night with no interference from the police. The chief of police and the police judge assured me that the loitering of unchaperoned women on the streets of evenings will not be permitted, and Lexington girls will be expected to keep off the streets if they

to not wish to be misunderstood." "I believe the mothers are in a large measure to blame for the numbers of girls on the streets in the evening.
